Captain Marden Talks.

Ex-Capt. F. E. H. Marden of the police force was seen yesterday by a reporter, and asked what he intended to do regarding his recent transfer from the captaincy of the watch to the post of patrolman. "I have been looking up the matter," said Mr. Marden, "as is my right to do, and you can say that I contend that I was legally and duly elected as captain of the night watch. When the present officers were elected as patrolmen, every certificate read that they were to succeed some one who was then elected and acting as officer. My appointment reads to succeed Mr. Wendell. Now this Mr Wendell was at that time captain of the night watch. I received the papers to fill his place, therefore I contend that I was duly elected. I have not said as yet that I should not fight the case or that I shou'd. I do think that I shall look the matter up thoroughly and see just why I was used in this way, without more than five minutes' notice and without a chance for continuance. If my commission was not right, I can't see why every man on the force is not subject to trouble."

Largest of Her Class.

Many wagers have been won and lost since the visit of the big schooner Frank A. Palmer, owing to the claim that she is the largest vessel of her kind afloat. The blue book of U. S. Marine services gives several four masted schooners on the great lakes even 1000 tons larger. The statement in the HERALD that she is the largest vessel of her kind afloat at sea, is correct up to date.

Those Dreadful Sores

They Continued to Spread in Spite of Treatment but Now They are Healed—A Wonderful Work.

"For many years I have been a great sufferer with varicose veins on one of my limbs. My foot and limb became dreadfully swollen. When I stood up I could feel the blood rushing down the veins of this limb. One day I accidentally hit my foot against some object and a sore broke out which continued to spread and was exceedingly painful. I concluded I needed a blood purifier and I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. In a short time those dreadful sores which had caused me so much suffering, began to heal. I kept on faithfully with Hood's Sarsaparilla, and in a short time my limb was completely healed and the sores gave me no more pain. I cannot be too thankful for the wonderful work Hood's Sarsaparilla, has done for me." MRS. A. E. GILSON, Hartland, Vermont.

WITH THE POLICE

Officer Quinn Captures an Intoxicated Female Yesterday Afternoon

There was one drunk, one hold-over and three lodgers registered on the police blotter this morning. The hold-over was Jerry Woodsum, who was arraigned in police court at ten o'clock, while the drunk was the fair Alice Remick. Alice says that her lover went back on her Sunday, which drove her to drink. At any rate she had a most beautiful jag on and was entertaining a crowd of small boys in the Globe Grocery when Officer Quinn appeared on the scene. This officer immediately escorted love sick Alice to the station house. She had a good vocabulary of pet names that she called the officer on the way over and was repeating the same up to the time she fell asleep in one of the bunks of the long cell.

Navy Yard Notes

Secretary Long decided to lay to equip the torpedo boats Dahlgren and the A. L M. Craven, under construction at the Bath Iron Works, with two torpedo tubes instead of three. These two boats are nominally thirty knot vessels, but Naval Constructor Hanscom promises that they will make a record of thirty and one-half knots.

Naval experts say the efficiency of the two boats will not be affected by the reduction in the number of their torpedo tubes, as it is proposed to place one near the centre of the boat and the second towards the centre in the stern.

A board consisting of Commodore F. M. Bunce, Commodore H. L Howison and Commodore J. C. Watson has been ordered to assemble on February 2 to examine Captain H. B Robeson, captain of the Portsmouth navy yard, for promotion. A vacancy will exist by reason of the retirement of Rear Admiral L. A. Beardslee on Feb 1.

Commandant Remey returns from a three weeks' absence tomorrow.

Captain H B. Robeson, U. S. N., will leave for Washington in few days.

Funeral Services

The funeral services over the remains of Mrs. Abbie Dwyer were held at the Church of the Immaculate Conception this morning. Rev. Father O'Callaghan said high requim mass in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends of the deceased. The following gentlemen acted as pall bearers; Cornelius Regan, John Long, Thomas Loughlin, Dennis Lynes, John Phelan and Jeremiah Conhig. Interment took place in St. Mary's cemetery.

The last sad rites over the remains of the late Albion R. Philbrook were held at his home in Rye this afternoon in the presence of the immediate relatives and friends of the deceased. Interment took place in the Central cemetery.

Death of Charles B. Gafney.

The sad intelligence was flashed on the telegraph wires this morning from Rochester, announcing the death of Charles B. Gafney, and it carried sadness to the hearts of hundreds of our citizens. A telegram was received by Hon. Frank Jones at 8 o'clock, and it was indeed a sad message to him, as the Judge was one of his most intimat friends. Mr. Jones was very fond of "Gaf," as he was familiarly known, and he served as Mr. Jones' private secretary while he was president of the Boston & Maine R. R. Judge Gafney was a warm friend of the lawyers in this city, and his death was learned with sincere regret by them.

No Pleasure, Because no Health.

No interest in the things of life, or indeed in any of life's pleasures. Such is the daily lament of thousands because of some disease, the condition being that of utter weakness and prostration The most skilful treatment is necessary for the cure of such diseases; the ordinary practitioner is not equal to it. It is to Dr Greene, 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass., the most successful physician in the world in the cure of disease, to whom you should write about your case. You can consult him free, and he will write you his opinion and advice free.

Our Playing Cards

The cards with which we play whist and cinch and other games originated like many good things in the far East. The Hindoos had the first cards, though authentic, Chinese documents state that the dotted cards of China were invented in 1120 to entertain the wives of the king. Chess was probably the forerunner of cards. Chess originally had four kings and four sets of players and cards have four suits.

The Storm.

The snow storm that set in shortly after nine o'clock last evening and continued with more or less severity up until nearly noon today is the worst we have experienced so far this winter. In all, about twelve inches fell, which was pleasing to the laboring men around town, as it furnished employment for a large number of them.

The milkmen had a tough time serving their customers this morning, nearly all of them having an extra horse hitched in to help break out the roads. With this extra help it was along in the middle of the afternoon before they got around on their route.

Street Commissioner Ridge had a large force of men out long before daylight with the city snow ploughs breaking out the roads and making paths on all the principal streets leading to the shoe factory and button shop.

At the depot all the trains are behind time on account of the immense amount of snow on the track and are all the way from ten to thirty minutes late. The hugh snow plows were kept running all night which kept the tracks fairly clear of snow. Station Agent Grant had a force of nearly a hundred shovelers at work in the freight yard this morning cleaning out the switches and loading the snow onto empty flat cars and then dumping the same into the river.

The Concord train was nearly two hours late in arriving this morning.

The electric road between this city and York beach also suffered and made running on time an impossibility. Superintendent Meloon had the electric snow plow out bright and early with a large gang of men armed with snow shovels and soon got things straightened out along the line.

It was a rough and wild night on the water but as yet no wrecks have been reported.

FUN IN CONGRESS.

Fine History of a Little Squabble Among Members In 1794.

Previous to the coinage of silver dollars at the Philadelphia mint in 1794 the following amusing incidents occurred in congress while the emblems and devices proposed for their ornamentation were being discussed:

A member of the house from the south bitterly opposed the choice of the eagle on the ground of its being the "king of birds," and hence neither proper nor suitable to represent a nation whose institutions and interests were wholly inimical to monarchical forms of government. Judge Thatcher in reply playfully suggested that perhaps a goose might suit the gentleman, as it was rather a humble and republican bird and would also be serviceable in other respects, as the goslings would answer to place upon the dimes.

This reply created considerable merriment, and the irate southerner, considering the humorous rejoinder an insult, sent a challenge to the judge, who promptly declined it. The bearer, rather astonished, asked, "Will you be branded as a coward?" "Certainly, if he pleases," replied Thatcher. "I always was one, and he knew it or he would never have risked a challenge."

The affair occasioned much mirth, but finally cordial relations were restored, the irritable southerner concluding there was nothing to be gained in fighting one who fired nothing but jokes.—"History of the United States Mint."

WITH KIT CARSON.

"UNCLE BILLY" EWING TELLS OF EARLY DAYS ON THE BORDER.

How He Captured Apache Bill, Whom He Sold to General Magruder of the Confederate Army—A Mexican Bullet In His Knee For Fifty Years.

Colonel William H. Ewing, better known to the pioneers of Montana as "Uncle Billy," is a native of Kentucky and is no ordinary war veteran, for he began his military career more than 60 years ago when 20 years old, when he entered the army for the Seminole Indian war. Ten years later "Uncle Billy" enlisted and went through the Mexican war, of which he is now a pensioner, and he carries a memento of the battle of Taos in his knee—a Mexican bullet.

"Uncle Billy" did not take part in the war of the rebellion, as the breaking out of that war found him an owner of slaves on a plantation in Missouri, and he was in the dilemma of sympathizing with the south and unable to fight against the flag which he had helped to carry and support so long. He came to Helena, bringing with him some of his slaves, who were loath to part from their former master, but the modern conveniences for protection from the severity of Montana winters were somewhat scarce in Helena in 1864-5, and the negroes being unable to stand the cold he sent them to Oregon for a milder climate.

"Uncle Billy" is as full of the history of the west as an egg is of meat. There is not a section of the United States west of the Mississippi or north of Mexico with which he is not familiar, and when in a reminiscent mood he tells many a frontier story of mountain and plain of intense interest.

"I was all through California in 1848-9, and have been through there several times since. I rode a mule once in the early fifties from Sacramento down through into old Mexico. I have many friends in Los Angeles, and, besides, I shall probably see Apache Bill down there somewhere. The last I heard of him he was a prosperous citizen in that vicinity. Who is Apache Bill? Well, I don't mind telling you the story.

"Let me see. It was somewhere along in the early spring of 1855. I was one of a company of guides and spies numbering about 30 mounted frontiersmen, all experienced fellows, under the leadership of Kit Carson, about whom so much yellow backed literature has been written.

"Well, this company of guides and spies was attached to Colonel Fauntleroy's troops in pursuit of the Apache Indians who had been marauding, murdering and looting on the Mexican frontier above Taos. The regular troops, about 500 men, had been called out to suppress these depredations and it was the duty of Carson our captain, and his company to scout in advance of the troops. The weather about that time of the year was somewhat cool and disagreeable. The scouts came upon the Apaches, 500 strong, early in the morning before light, and it was our object to surround them and hold them in engagement if possible until the arrival of the regulars, but the wily devils were on the alert and were already breaking camp We stampeded and captured enough ponies however, to set the greater number of them afoot, and then pursued them hotly several days into the fastnesses of the mountains, where we came upon them again. In this second brush with them we killed a number, including some squaws—for they had their squaws with them and it being in the early morning it was impossible to distinguish the bucks on account of the similarity of their dress with that of the squaws at that season of the year. But let me say right here that the squaws of the Apaches were as merciless in their warfare as the bucks themselves. Kit Carson shot one in the back while she was on horseback and just in the act of getting away with one of our men, who was down, but Carson was greatly grieved in having shot a woman, for Kit was the tenderest hearted man that ever drew a blade on an Indian, and he afterward gave a Mexican five silver pesos to go back and put her out of her misery.

"After a hotly contested engagement through the chaparral the Apaches retreated farther into their stronghold and I went in pursuit of a number, when one whom I had taken for a buck Indian, but who turned out to be a squaw, attempted to jump her pony across a deep, narrow gorge in the hills. The horse failed to make a successful leap and fell to the bottom and lay on his back, fast in the ravine, with his feet fanning the air. As it seemed fruitless to follow the rest of them, I dismounted and entered the cavernous bed of the now dry mountain stream in search of the unhorsed foe. I followed the creek up the gorge about 150 yards, when I came upon a bed of sand at the edge of a great stratum of slate rock, under which the water had washed a deep recess.

"Noticing that the tracks of the fleeing Indian were somewhat irregular in this sand, I stopped, and getting down on all fours I peered into the depths beneath from which came no sound, but after my eyes had become accustomed to the darkness I saw two little eyeballs that flashed like diamonds. I managed to reach in and get hold of a little human leg and pulled out an Apache papoose, probably 3 years old who began to squall and fight like a wildcat, having with animal instinct remained motionless and quiet until captured. Then discovering that I had been following a squaw, I went back to my horse, tied the papoose in my blanket and, mother fashion, cinched him on my back. In that way, after giving up further pursuit of the Indians, I rode with him 100 miles back to the troops. I named him Bill, after myself, Apache Bill.

"Getting to camp, I found that nothing would reduce the little redskin from his savagery but plentiful supplies of sugar, and finding him too much of an incumbrance in my line of business I sold him to Lieutenant Colonel John B. Magruder for 100 pesos in Mexican silver. His purchaser afterward became General Magruder of the Confederate army and took little Apache Bill as a body servant all through the war of the rebellion. Then he educated him, and I expect to see him in California."—Helena (Mon.) Independent.

Perils of the Ski.

"Already Hal had gone back a few steps and then gliding forward to the brink of the shoot paused a moment and was off. Breathless we watched his swiftly moving figure as it approached the jump. He gathered himself together for the spring as he approached the top, and the next moment we saw him hurled, as if from a catapult, into space. Far out over the frozen hillside we saw him dart, and at last he struck, swayed a moment, and then quickly recovering himself sped swiftly over the lake. Stopping himself as quickly as possible, he turned and running back called out: 'Don't try it! It's too hard!'

"But Ole, who thought if Hal could do it he could, had scarcely heard the words before he started. Like a shot he struck the embankment. For a moment he lost his head. His ski crossed, and the next he was hurled over and over down the hill. His ski had broken, and luckily, for if it had not he could not have escaped a severe injury.

"Again Hal cried: 'Don't come! Try the old shoot!'

"But I was confident that I could succeed, and so determined in my way. Everything went smoothly until I reached the embankment, when, upon gathering myself for the spring, the strap on my ski gave way and I knew I was undone. Never, should I live to be a hundred, shall I forget that moment, as suspended in midair I felt that sick sensation which comes when one's nerve fails creep quickly over me. Instinctively I closed my eyes and trusted to luck. How I ever came out alive I never know, but a good Providence landed me in a snowbank."—Outing.

Will Spain lose her head?

The yellow journals of New York are trying hard to have Consul General Lee resign.

It is hinted that when Consul General Weyler left Cuba he forgot his typewriter, and that is now in commission.

A scientist has discovered that a man has five million blood corpuscles, while a woman has only four millions. Now, will the women stop talking of their superiority to men?

It may, of course, be true that Spaniards have captured the insurgent capital of Cuba, but it is difficult to understand why they are having such rejoicing over it. The capital is wherever the president of Cuba is; in fact, as Rufus Choate said of Boston, it is not a place, but a condition.

If Senator Morgan isn't careful he'll get ex-Pres. Cleveland so excited over Hawaii that he will leave Princeton and transfer his hunting to Washington, gunning for the annexation scheme which Morgan says he favors and which he says he doesn't. We take it that he knows his own position.

The fact that Minister De Lome has given his own government by cable a most reassuring report on the real attitude of the United States bears out the idea that we shall have no trouble. The thing chiefly needed is to keep some of the younger naval officers well in hand. They are all ready to lick half a dozen Spaniards apiece.

GUESTS MUST EAT CHICKEN.

Queer Provisions of a Will Affecting a Roadhouse.

"I know of many wills in which there are some queer provisions," said a well known lawyer in an up town hotel the other evening, "but the most curious will I ever heard of relates to a small roadhouse I visited while out driving some time ago. The house is on the Hackensack plank road in New Jersey. Stopping there for dinner, I ordered a good meal, and when it was served a small roast chicken was brought with it.

"'I did not order that,' I complained.

"'I know you did not,' replied the waiter, 'but you will have to eat it.'

"I was surprised, but ate the chicken. I noticed that chicken was served to every customer who ordered dinner. Later I asked the proprietress why it was done.

"'Well, you see,' she replied, 'my father owned this place for many years. He was inordinately fond of chicken. When he died, he put it in his will that whoever succeeded him here must have roast chicken for dinner every day. In case his successor should fail to do so for two consecutive days, he ordered that the property go to charity. I took the place after his death and I have been serving chicken every day since.

"'Several of the charitable organizations that would get the property if the provision of the will were violated watch me closely. To prevent any basis for an action at law I make all of my customers eat chicken. Some of them object, but they give in when I insist.'"—New York Commercial.

Couldn't Tell Much About It.

The following conversation took place between the president of the State Normal school at Mansfield and George K., a farm laborer, when the latter, after debating a long while in his own mind whether to get a "bike" or take a course at Mansfield applied for admission to the school:

"Have you ever been through algebra?"

"Yes, sir."

"Can you tell me anything about it now?"

A Stocking Saving Idea.

The other day I came across an economical contrivance for saving the heels of stockings—nothing more than a piece of soft kid cut to the shape of the heel, with a band sewed round it, a piece of elastic across the instep, and it was intended to be slipped on before wearing the shoe.

TOLD A COLLEAGUE TO SIT DOWN.

Acrimonious Debate In Senate on Silver Question.

Washington, Jan. 26.—In reply to statements made by Mr. Allen concerning the present administration of the pension office, Senator Gallinger of New Hampshire presented statistics Tuesday showing that during Commissioner Evans' administration of the office 20 percent more claims have been adjudicated than were adjudicated during the corresponding period of the last administration. Mr. Allen said he did not care to be embroiled in a controversy with the commissioner of pensions, whom he scarcely knew, but he desired to insist that the Republican party's friendship for the old soldier was a sham and a pretense.

Mr. Allison reviewed the history of the Stanley Matthews resolution, maintaining that its passage at that time was not in opposition to public interest or in derogation of the rights of the public creditors. He held that now the situation was quite different. There was no disposition on the part of the administration to evade the law, and the Republican party had maintained that it ought to be the purpose of the government to maintain the gold and silver money of the country at a parity.

Mr. Tillman asked Mr. Allison whether he would say in terms that the bond obligations of the government were payable in silver. In reply Mr. Allison quoted the law, that the bonds were payable in coin; but that was not satisfactory to Mr. Tillman, who insisted upon an answer, yes or no. Mr. Allison declined to have words put into his mouth.

In response to a question of Mr. Teller, Mr. Allison said he thought it would be proper for the secretary of the treasury to pay the obligations of the government in either silver or gold; "but," declared Mr. Allison, "the secretary of the treasury, if he is an honest man, in reaching his decision as to action upon that point, must take into consideration existing conditions, one of which is that this government is pledged to maintain the gold and silver currency of the country at a parity." He maintained that if the objects of the silver advocates were carried into effect, it would be impossible to maintain the parity of gold and silver coin.

Mr. Berry (Dem., Ark.) said that the country had before it the spectacle of a secretary of the treasury who wanted to redeem silver dollars in gold and firmly to fasten the gold standard upon the country. Yet the president had not the nerve to kick him out of the cabinet. Mr. Berry appealed for the passage of the resolution on the ground of public interest.

Mr. Teller of Colorado followed in an extended speech in support of the resolution. He declared that it was a question of law.

Mr. Hoar dissented from Mr. Teller's proposition that this resolution involved only a question of law and urged that it had come now to a question of honor. "This is not a question of law," said he. "It is a question of the violation of the public faith. Shylock had the law on his side for a good while, but nobody supposed that Shylock, without derogation of the rights of Antonio, could take that pound of flesh."

Mr. Teller contended that he had quite as much regard for the national honor as had other members of the senate. He then said: "I believe in paying the debts of the government in silver, even if that is the cheaper metal. The government has the right to the difference according to its contract. The silver dollar, which the gentleman from Iowa (Allison) says is as good as the gold dollar, is paid to the mechanic, the artisan and the laborer in liquidation of obligations incurred with them, and I hold that the bond purchaser is no better than the man with the blistered hand and ought to be paid in the same money. The treasury department has been making law to suit itself for 20 years."

Mr. Fairbanks endeavored to propound a question to Mr. Teller.

"Sit down," cried the Colorado senator. "I've been badgered enough." Mr. Teller declared that he had seen the national treasury robbed—a transaction the most disgraceful ever accomplished by a national administration. In view of that fact he thought that the arrogation to themselves by the opponents of the resolution of all honesty was not warranted by the facts.

Mr. Hoar replied to Mr. Teller in a speech in which he deplored the "remarkable effort" of the Colorado senator. He contended that the question was not one of legal power, but of honor and good faith.

Mr. Lodge of Massachusetts said that it was well understood that the bond purchasers were to be paid in gold, as they paid gold for the bonds, and he quoted from a speech of Mr. Teller in which the same idea was advanced. The Massachusetts senator offered an amendment which provides that all of the resolution except the resolving clause be stricken out and the declaration substituted that the bonds of the United States are payable, principal and interest, in the money which is the highest money in the world, in gold or its equivalent, whether that be silver or paper.

Mr. Hale (Rep., Me.) declared that the debate had settled the fact that it was the desire of the advocates of the resolution to bring the country to a silver basis and to make the payment of all debts, public and private, in silver, which was now worth less than half what gold was worth. He was willing, he said, to have the people of the country pass upon the proposition. "It was voted down in 1896," declared Mr. Hale, "and I have no fear that the American people will now take the back track upon it."

AT ODDS OVER PROSPERITY.

Democrats Questioned Its Existence, and Republicans Answered.

Washington, Jan. 26.—The discussion of the industrial conditions in the country which occupied the attention of the house Monday broke out afresh Tuesday, when Mr. Richardson (Dem., Tenn.), speaking to a pro forma amendment, adduced some figures and financial authorities to prove that prosperity had not yet appeared. He quoted Wharton Barker to prove that there had been a decline equal to 1 percent in the price of 100 standard commodities.

"If prosperity had not yet returned," asked W. A. Stone (Rep., Pa.), "how does it happen that in all the industrial regions men are employed and are not employed by charity as they were under the Cleveland administration?"

"The trouble with the gentleman," replied Mr. Richardson, "is that his premises are all wrong. Labor is not employed in all the industrial regions. In New England 125,000 workers are out on a strike."

Mr. Grosvenor, Mr. Stone, Mr. Dingley and other Republicans all arose to reply, and in the confusion Mr. Richardson called out that he had no desire to interfere with Mr. Stone's gubernatorial boom.

"I am glad to have the endorsement of that side," retorted Mr. Stone, smiling.

Proceeding, Mr. Richardson said he was reminded of a colloquy between a minstrel and an interlocutor, in which the former, in reply to the latter, said there were only two things exactly alike—the Cleveland panic and the McKinley prosperity.

Mr. Grosvenor raised a laugh by saying it was a very poor case which had to be bolstered up with the arguments of Wharton Barker and illustrations from minstrelsy. Mr. Grosvenor concluded by sending to the clerk's desk an Associated Press bulletin announcing the election of McComas to the senate in Maryland. The Republicans applauded the announcement enthusiastically.

Mr. Dockery (Dem., Mo.), in discussing the cotton mill strike, contended that the strike had been urged by the operators in order that they might dispose of their surplus stock. The trouble was we were enormously overproducing in this country, and in the face of that fact the Republican party was restricting and narrowing our markets. The time was coming when this policy would be reversed. The growing trend of public sentiment could not be stayed. Eventually the tariff barriers would be broken down and our products would go out upon the seas of the world.

The political debate continued for an hour, the Republicans maintaining and the Democrats denying the existence of prosperity.

Mr. Smith (Dem., Ariz.) made an attack on the present system of educating the Indian. He declared that the Carlisle and Hampton schools were a mistake; that an Indian could not be civilized by teaching him to read and write and sing a psalm. The Indian, he said, must receive an industrial education, but it must be given him in the vicinity of his home, not in the east. In this bill, he said, $2,500,000 was wanted. Mr. Walker (Rep., Mass.) agreed with Mr. Smith that the present policy was unsatisfactory, illogical and impracticable. He moved to strike out the appropriation for the Carlisle school. Without voting on the amendment, the committee rose and the house adjourned.

NEARLY KILLED HIS WIFE.

Middletown, Conn., Jan. 26.—John Ward, aged 60, in a fit of insanity, made a savage assault with a club upon his wife at their home in South Farms yesterday afternoon. The woman had been knocked down by a blow and the man was beating her on the head when a son arrived upon the scene and, after a severe struggle, succeeded in preventing further injuries. Ward then fled, but was later captured hiding in the barn.

The outcome of the attack is yet a matter of doubt, though it is feared will result fatally. Ward had previously been confined in a hospital for the insane in this city, but was released apparently cured.

CUT IN WAGES.

Willamantic, Conn., Jan. 26.—Notice was posted in the Willimantic cotton mill yesterday that on Jan. 31 wages would be reduced 10 percent. The company employs about 200 hands, and the weekly pay-roll is between $1100 and $1200. The officers of the company state that they are compelled to make the reduction in order that they may more successfully compete with other manufacturers who have inaugurated cuts in wages.

London Streets.

If any one were to undertake to walk, one way only, through all the streets of London, he would be obliged to go a distance of 2,600 miles, or as far as it is across the American continent from New York to San Francisco. This will give an idea of the distance one will have to go to see thoroughly even the greater part of the city of London—the largest city in the world.

DEADLOCK ENDED.

Tie In Boston's Board of Aldermen Broken by an Agreement.

Boston, Jan. 26.—The aldermanic deadlock, which has prevailed for three weeks over the election of a chairman, was broken Tuesday afternoon, an agreement having been reached between the two factions. Under the terms of the compromise a Republican occupies the chair until April 1, when he will resign and a Democrat will take his place until Oct. 1, when he, too, resigns in favor of the Republican, who holds the office until the end of the year. As a result of the agreement Alderman Dyer was elected chairman. The ballot was the 58th taken, but the vote this time, instead of being a tie, was unanimous.

Previously argument had been heard in the supreme court on an application for a writ of mandamus in the name of the attorney general, to compel the aldermen to act on the precept ordered by the legislature relative to the holding of an election for representative. Counsel for the board said among other things: "There is no doubt in my mind that there is no court in this state or anywhere that has, by means of a writ of mandamus, attempted to interfere with legislative duties. It has never been issued for the purpose of compelling people who have sworn to do their duty as officials. The court has no jurisdiction to order this body to vote a particular way. It can order them to comply with the statutes. But there is a tribunal. If this body cannot do business, the people of Boston will inflict severe and deserved punishment. But for the supreme judicial court of Massachusetts to interfere in this political question I think would be unwise."

After hearing the attorney for the petitioner, Judge Holmes took the case under advisement.

FALL RIVER OPERATIVES.

Fall River, Jan. 26.—The operatives in the frame spinning department of the No. 4 mill of the Fall River Iron Works company state that in spite of the statement by the management that the strike there is practically settled and the majority of the strikers back at work, it is a fact that there were but 25 persons at work in the department yesterday and only 40 frames running. They state that they will remain firm and will use persuasion to keep all others out of the mill.

The complaints received at the headquarters of the Carders' union indicate an increasing uneasiness in this class of operatives throughout the city, and point to further trouble in some of the mills, those most prominently mentioned being the Granite, Hargraves, Parker and Laurel Lake.

At the Narragansett mill it is reported that the management has succeeded in filling the places of the striking spoolers and that when some of them applied for their positions, they were refused work.

The doffers at the Sagamore No. 2 have started trouble and left work, taking with them some of the frame spinners. They claim that in addition to the reduction, the speed of the machinery has been increased, making their work harder. The places of the strikers were partially filled, it is said, by help from the iron works mill, and there was a slight demonstration in front of the mill at noon yesterday, the crowd dispersing, however, on the appearance of officers.

TILLMAN'S DISPENSARY BILL.

Washington, Jan. 26.—The senate South Carolina dispensary bill was given a hearing by the house committee on judiciary yesterday. Senator Tillman and State Attorney Barber argued in advocacy of the bill, which has already passed the senate. They contended that each state has the right to regulate and control traffic within its borders. J. P. K. Bryan of South Carolina opposed the bill and claimed it to be unconstitutional and a violation of the inter-state commerce law. He sought to show that making of the laws by one state which would work to the disadvantage of others was not in harmony with the doctrine of the constitution.

Lachrymose Joy.

The two men had passed a couple of hours in the house of commons and on speaker had been talking all the time. "I can't stand this any longer," said the first one. "Let's come out of it."

"Oh, I enjoy it," said the second, a widower, as the tears streamed down his cheeks. "I never heard anything that reminded me so much of my poor, dear wife."—London Tit-Bits.

MASK AGAINST MASK.

The White Ones Scared the Burglars and Saved the Silverware.

We were telling ghost stories one rainy evening at a house party in a Maine town, says a Youth's Companion contributor, when a young lady remarked, with a laugh, "Mine is not exactly a ghost story, but is something like one, and it is, besides, a personal experience.

"I was spending a week with a friend, Frances Livermore, a few years ago, during the absence of her father and mother. The housemaid was called home by illness in her family, and my friend and I were left alone but for the company of a big hound. We were not at all timid, for Tige was an excellent watchdog.

"On the last day of my stay we went to a picnic, from which we returned very tired and with faces sadly sunburned. We applied buttermilk and then covered them with white linen masks, with holes cut for eyes and mouth. We had great merriment over our comical appearance.

"Frances expected her father and mother to return that evening, and we sat up rather late awaiting them. At last, however, we gave them up and retired to bed and were soon asleep, with our masks still on.

"Along in the night we were awakened by a noise in the rooms below stairs.

"'They've come!' whispered Frances. 'I'll run down and see if they're all right,' saying which she rose, lighted a candle and started down stairs.

"As soon as she had left the room I decided to follow her, and lighting another candle I threw on a white wrapper and hurried after her.

"The sounds came from the dining room, and we proceeded in that direction. Frances opened the door, expecting to see her mother and father. Instead we beheld two masked men hurriedly putting the silverware into a bag.

"The burglars looked up as we appeared, then hastily dropped bag and silver and fled to the kitchen and out of an open window.

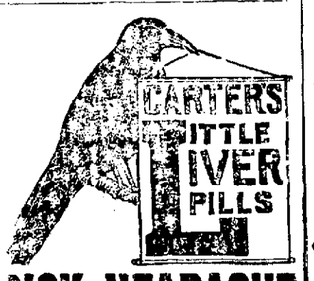

"We did not scream, but stood for a moment petrified with astonishment and terror. Then we looked at each other and did not wonder that our appearance had frightened the burglars. We were in white from head to foot, and with those masks, by the weird light of the candles, we must have looked like veritable ghosts.

"Tige, it appeared, had been lured into the stable and shut up, making it apparent that the burglars were men whom the dog knew. Mr. and Mrs. Livermore had been detained a few miles from home by a broken bridge.

"Frances and I rallied from our fright, hunted up Tige and sat up the remainder of the night, but nothing further occurred. The burglars had carried off nothing."

"Poets," said the man who writes in verse, "are born, not made."

"Possibly, possibly," returned the weary critic, "but of late I have been inclined to the belief that they are neither born nor made."—Chicago Tribune.

Fickleness at the Races.

"Yes," said young Mrs. Torkins, "I learned something at the races."

"What was it?" asked her husband apprehensively.

"I learned that popularity is something that cannot be depended on; that the admirers of today may be the foes of tomorrow."

"How did you learn all that?"

FILIBUSTERING VESSEL LOST.

Overtaken by Disaster When a Few Days Out.

SERIOUS BREAK AT STERNPOST.

Pumps Became Choked and Craft In Bad Condition.

Men Bailed For Their Lives Up to Their Necks—Steam Kept Up by Use of Kerosene—Nineteen of the Twenty-Three Aboard Took to Boats—Timely Appearance of a Steamer.

Providence, Jan. 26.—The small two-masted filibustering steamer Tillie of New York was abandoned at sea last Sunday afternoon while off Barnegat. Nineteen of those on board of her were saved in the midst of a terrible storm by schooner Governor Ames, but four men could not be taken off and went down with the vessel. Forty tons of dynamite, three dynamite guns and a considerable quantity of ammunition, undoubtedly intended for the warring Cubans, were on board the Tillie when she sank.

The Governor Ames arrived from Newport News at 11 o'clock yesterday. On board were the 19 rescued from the Tillie. Ten of them were Cubans and the remainder were the officers and crew of the abandoned steamer, and the famous Captain Jack O'Brien, who had charge of the expedition, it is supposed. Captain Gust Waldemar of the Ames said that last Sunday afternoon about 2 o'clock, while 23 miles south by west of Shinnecock, he sighted a small two-masted steamer flying her colors union down as a signal of distress. He steered toward the steamer and, watching her through the glass, saw that she was deep in the water and laboring heavily. Soon afterwards he was near enough to make out two boats filled with men just astern of the distressed craft. The wind was blowing 40 miles an hour and the sea was fierce. The waves were breaking clear across the Ames amidships, and Captain Waldemar had his hands full to manage his great ship; but he realized that the steamer close by was sinking, that many men were in peril of their lives, and resolved to do what he could to aid them. The Ames' course was changed to bring her as close to the steamer as possible, and when within a quarter of a mile of her the five-master was hove to.

Two boatloads of men from the foundering steamer commenced to work their way toward the Ames. The sea threw them around with great violence, and they were in danger of capsizing or swamping during every moment of their trip to the rescuing schooner. When they were in close proximity to her, Captain Waldemar directed them to drop under the stern of the Ames, but to keep a good distance away. Lines were thrown to the boats. It was impossible for them to come near enough to the schooner to allow the men to climb aboard, for the seas would have thrown their boats against the Ames' side and a wholesale fatality would have resulted. Bowlines were made of small lines and thrown to the endangered men. They placed the lines around themselves, jumped overboard and in that fashion were hauled aboard by the crew of the Ames, one at a time. Eleven men finally stood safe on the Ames' quarterdeck. They said that eight more, including Captain Berry, were still aboard the Tillie.

Captain Waldemar called for volunteers to go in the Tillie's largest boat to save the remainder of the steamer's crew. It was risking their lives, but Second Mate Nocer, a strapping fellow, and four of the seamen stepped forward. They struggled to the Tillie's largest boat which was dashed up and down wildly as she swung at the Ames' stern and put off to the Tillie, took off Captain Berry and three more. Nine men were all the boat could carry. The four poor fellows left aboard were promised that they should be saved as quick as the boat could return to them, and the trip back to the Ames began.

By the time the nine men had been hauled aboard the Ames after the manner described, the gale had increased greatly in force. The wind was blowing 65 miles an hour, picking up the tops of the waves bodily and blowing the water in sheets along the surface of the sea. Darkness began to lower. The Ames' five brave volunteers were exhausted and it would have been useless to have tried to make another trip even with fresh men. All hands realized that the poor fellows on the Lillie were doomed—that there was no help for them. Reluctantly Captain Waldemar put the vessel on her course again. She entered the bay Monday and was towed up yesterday morning.

A reporter interviewed Captain George Berry, master of the Lillie, while she was being made fast to the dock. Captain Berry, waiving the question of filibustering at first, gave an account of the trip of the Tillie. He said that she was purchased two months ago by McAllister Bros. of New York and was fitted for carrying cattle and freight. He took in a cargo of 280 tons of soft coal and a great quantity of cased provisions last week in New York and sailed on Wednesday bound for Tampa, Fla. After discharging the coal at Tampa he understood that the vessel was to commence carrying cattle from Tampa to Havana for the Spanish government. Leaving New York, he proceeded to Montauk Point where on Saturday 15 Cubans joined the vessel. He took them merely as passengers, the captain averred, and was going to land them at Tampa. The Tillie put to sea at once. She proceeded in a southwesterly direction from Montauk Point under steam and sail at the rate of seven knots an hour. Saturday night she commenced to leak. Her wooden hull was apparently tight, but Captain Berry thinks that the shaft alley must have been broken, for water commenced to come in around the stuffing box. The danger was apparent from the start, for it was no tiny stream which trickled in at the foot of the Tillie's sternpost. At the time the trouble began the vessel was 80 miles to the eastward of Barnegat and 43 miles from the nearest land.

The steam pumps soon became choked and then the situation quickly became desperate. An attempt had been made to stop the leak upon its discovery, but it seemed to become worse steadily. When the pumps became choked soon after they were called into use, Captain Berry headed her for the Long Island shore, intending, if no coasting vessels should be sighted, to take the chances of getting his crew and passengers ashore through the Long Island surf. Desperately they worked while Captain Berry watched anxiously from the pilot house for a passing vessel. At last the fires were put out. The water was level with the coal on the grate bars. Cotton waste in great bunches were thrust under the boilers. It was soaked with kerosene and blazed furiously, keeping steam on while the frantic men in the hold were bailing for their lives up to their necks in the icy water.

For two hours steam was kept up by using kerosene. Twice during this time Captain Berry sighted two vessels. One of them was a tramp steamer, far to the northwest. The other was a schooner off shore. Both were too far away to see the signal of distress, and both passed quickly and out of sight and hope. At last the fires were drowned out, and all hands gave up the last hope of reaching shore, for the steamer was still many miles from Long Island.

The two boats were lowered, and as many men as they would hold fell into them and swung astern of the foundering steamer, holding to her by lines in order not to desert their shipmates, for whom there was no room in the boats. Just after this move, Captain Berry sighted the topmast of a vessel, which he instantly knew must be the Governor Ames, the only five-masted schooner in the world. The rest of the story of rescue was told as Captain Waldemar of the big schooner gave it.

Upon arriving at Providence Captain Jack O'Brien was not in evidence. There was a man aboard who resembled him in every particular, who gave the name of D. J. White and kept himself very much in the background. This gray-headed seafarer would not say a word, but left Captain Berry and Eliseo Cartaya, one of the Cuban leaders, to do all the talking. In spite of its being so generally a matter of suspicion, these two representatives of the party denied strenuously that the Tillie was a filibuster, and the individual who looked so much like Captain O'Brien, by sly winks at times when leading questions were asked concerning the Tillie's mission, directed the proper way to answer such a question.

The last signature to a testimonial to the crew of the Ames for the rescue is "John O'Brien," proving beyond a doubt that the celebrated O'Brien was of the party.

The mate of the Governor Ames, who claims to have had experience with filibusters, says that there can be no ground for the rumor that traitors aboard the Tillie scuttled the steamer. The men were all eager for one cause, and no one seemed anxious to have the vessel go down. The way they worked to keep the Tillie afloat, and the manner in which they clung to life showed their feelings. This officer claims that the steamer was not a filibuster, for she was too slow, being only able to make eight knots an hour. She was going to Tampa and from there to the Bahamas, where the cargo and men would be transferred to a speedier vessel like the Douglas or the Three Friends. The mate says the Ames might have saved all had not the gigantic five-master been so obstinate in the heavy seas and high winds. It took her two hours to get near enough to the Tillie to begin the rescue, and darkness came too soon for four men.

DETECTIVES GIVEN SLIP.

New York, Jan. 26.—The Tillie sailed from this city early last Thursday morning. She was cleared by James McAllister as owner, but until a couple of weeks previous was owned by the Vermont Central Railroad company. Rumors that the Tillie was a filibuster were freely circulated in this city after she had sailed last week, and revenue officials were said to have chased her. This report, however, was denied. Mr. McAllister also denied that the boat was connected with any filibustering expedition. According to the clearance papers the Tillie was bound to Key West in ballast. She was a very old boat, having been built in 1862, was 142 feet long with a beam of 26 feet. When sold by the Vermont Central it was said that she would be dismantled and turned into a coal barge for the Erie basin here.

Captain John O'Brien, reported to be among those saved, is supposed to be the "Jack" O'Brien who is alleged to have taken part in several filibustering expeditions. His home in Kearney, N. J., was watched by detectives during the past two weeks. The vigilance of the detectives was somewhat relaxed when it was stated that Captain O'Brien was sick in bed with a dangerous fever, and they only realized that he had given them the slip Tuesday.

THE CHAMPIONSHIP.

McCoy Issues Challenge to Corbett and Fitzsimmons.

READY TO FIGHT FOR BIG STAKE.

Ex-Champion Signed For Meeting With "Lanky Bob."

Schenectady, N. Y., Jan. 26.—During the last act of "The Pacific Mail," last night in this city, Charles McCoy stepped forward to the footlights and formally issued a challenge to Robert Fitzsimmons and James J. Corbett to contest for the championship of the world for $10,000 a side and a purse of $25,000.

CORBETT SIGNED ARTICLES.

Chicago, Jan. 26.—James J. Corbett has signed articles calling for a fight with Robert Fitzsimmons, which George Considine of Detroit is confident he can pull off next summer. The articles are identical with those governing the fight at Carson City, with the exception of the purse, which in this case is $25,000, as against $15,000 at Carson City.

Considine agrees to post a forfeit of $500 to go to the men in case he fails to pull off the fight. In return he demands a forfeit of $2500 from each man. Considine expressed great confidence in his ability to have the fight without interruption, and said that besides the purse offered for Fitzsimmons and Corbett he would offer $15,000 for "Kid" McCoy to go against Choynski, Maher, Jeffries or Ruhlin. "Kid" Lavigne, he said, had promised him that he would fight McPartland at 133 pounds. For this event a good purse will be offered. M. Co. sidine declared.

Considine is to meet Fitzsimmons in Detroit on Sunday and is sanguine of being able to induce the Australian to write his name beside that of Corbett on the articles of agreement.

POLICE INTERFERED.

Rochester, N. Y., Jan. 26.—The Cathy-Bonner bout before the Rochester Athletic club last night was stopped in the 19th round by the police. For 15 rounds the fighting had been very tame, but towards the finish the men warmed up. At the beginning of the 19th round there was every indication that it would become a rough and tumble battle, and the police put a stop to the proceedings. Referee Tommy Dixon called it a draw. Neither man was hurt, although Bonner's left eye was almost closed. Bonner had done nearly all the leading, but McCarthy's defence was excellent.

EIGHT LIVES LOST.

Spokane, Wash., Jan. 26.—Eight lives and probably nine were lost in the fire in the Great Eastern block. They were: Miss Alice Wilson, aged 18, employed as a hat trimmer; Maud Wilson, a sister of Alice, aged 5; Miss Rose Smith, aged 20; Miss H. G. Davis, an elderly lady from Nebraska City, Neb., who fell in descending from the fifth story; W. B. Gordan, a mining engineer; Mrs. Cora Peters and daughters, aged 9 and 7 years, respectively. It is also thought that Mrs. Peters' son, aged 12, perished.

Mrs. Davis was living with her daughter, Mrs. J. T. Pronger. They had rooms on the fourth floor and were cut off from the stairway and fire escape. The firemen failed in their efforts to lift ladders to the fifth story owing to a tangle of electric light and telephone wires. Mr. Pronger caught two large wires running up the outer wall of the building, crawled down these to the fourth story and managed to catch the top of the swaying ladders. He descended to the ground and was followed back up the ladder by a fireman carrying a light ladder. This was connected to the large ladder. Mrs. Pronger caught it and made it fast to the other end, and she descended in safety. Mrs. Davis tried to follow Mrs. Pronger, but in the dense smoke she missed the ladder. She came on down hand over hand until she reached the second story. There she lost her hold and fell to the stone pavement. She was 72 years of age.

EDITORIAL INDIGNATION.

Madrid, Jan. 26.—The Spanish editors sharply stigmatize the Maine incident as an "act of unwarranted provocation." Most of them, however, counsel the people of Havana to show forbearance. In official circles the tendency is to accept the argument that the United States is friendly, and that it is needless to attach importance to the visit of an American vessel to Havana.

The Impartial expresses fear that the dispatch of the battleship to Havana will provoke a conflict, and adds: "Europe cannot doubt America's attitude toward Spain; but the Spanish people, if necessary, will do their duty with honor."

The Epoch asks if the dispatch of the Maine is "intended as a sop to the jingoes," and adds: "We cannot suppose the American government so naive or badly informed as to imagine that the presence of American war vessels at Havana will be a cause of satisfaction to Spain or an indication of friendship."

The newspapers generally comment upon Secretary Long's explanation and agree in expressing the opinion that her visit is "inopportune and calculated to encourage the insurgents." It is announced that, "following Washington's example," the Spanish government will "instruct Spanish warships to visit a few American ports."

The members of St. Paul's Episcopal parish in Wickford, R. I., celebrated the 50th anniversary of the dedication of the present church yesterday. The parish is one of the oldest in the United States, being founded in 1707. In its early days it was distinguished by the presentation to it by Queen Anne of a silver communion service.

UNWARRANTED STATEMENT.

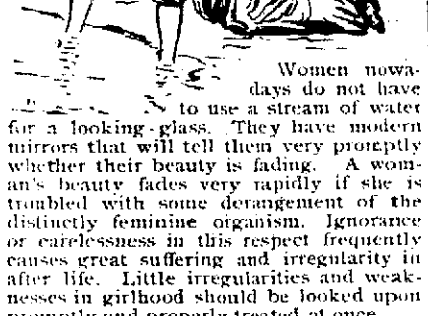

New York, Jan. 26.—In these dispatches on the night of Jan. 18 a statement was made that more than 30 unfaithful employes of Adams Express company in this city had been discovered in recent peculations amounting in sum between $2000 and $3000. This allegation grew out of conversation between a reporter and Attorney Abraham Levy, who gave as his best impression at that time the numbers and amounts above stated. Being prompted by the exact facts, Mr. Levy, in fairness to the interests involved and to himself, desires the statement to be made that there were not, at the time mentioned, peculations in the number indicated, nor to the extent stated. The information sent out on the date named indicated that peculation was conducted systematically among employes of the express company, and this statement Mr. Levy feels it is equally fair to himself to say was not warranted by utterances of his at the time.

CREATED A SCENE.

Washington, Jan. 26.—Leon Blous, who describes himself as a baker living in Baltimore, created a scene at the White House yesterday. He rode up to the main doorway in a cab and entering the house, violently announced that he had been a Catholic, but the time had now come to call out the United States army to put the Catholics down. He demanded that the president issue the necessary orders. The man was taken in charge by the police until his friends can be heard from.

STRIKE AT CENTREVILLE.

Providence, Jan. 26.—One hundred weavers employed in the Centreville cotton mill, owned by the estate of the late Lieutenant Governor Lapham, refused to go to work Tuesday, having been cut on an average of 16 per cent. Some of the weavers were reduced almost 19 per cent, and others about 14 per cent. Five hundred and fifty looms were shut down and about 125 are running. The operatives who have struck are quiet, and the rest of the mill is running as usual. The reduction at this mill did not go into effect until Monday.

Women nowadays do not have to use a stream of water for a looking-glass. They have modern mirrors that will tell them very promptly whether their beauty is fading. A woman's beauty fades very rapidly if she is troubled with some derangement of the distinctly feminine organism. Ignorance or carelessness in this respect frequently causes great suffering and irregularity in after life. Little irregularities and weaknesses in girlhood should be looked upon promptly and properly treated at once.

Mothers cannot be too conscientious in this respect, and cannot throw aside the prudery that is so prevalent upon this point too soon. Every young woman should know something about her own physical make-up, and the importance to her future of her local as well as general health. A woman who suffers from weaknesses peculiar to her sex will rapidly lose her beauty, her general health, her amiability and her usefulness and capability as a wife and housekeeper. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription promotes regularity of all feminine functions, gives sturdy health to the distinctly feminine organism and prepares it to meet the trials of wifehood and motherhood. The "Favorite Prescription" is not a cure-all. It is intended for but one class of disorders and is good for no other. Taken during the period of gestation, it makes parturition easy, and banishes the discomforts of the expectant months. All good medicine dealers sell it.

"I wish to express my thanks for the good I have received from Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription," writes Mrs. E. Scovill, of Bolton, Stephenson Co., Ills. "I have used it at different times for the last eight years. It is the best medicine for expectant mothers. I never tried it for that until my last baby. I had been very bad, almost helpless. I could not get out of bed alone, or even turn over. Last December I commenced taking the 'Favorite Prescription,' and could soon get in and out of bed as well as at any time. On March 29th I gave birth to an eleven pound boy without pain, and have since been as well and healthy as I ever was."

A VITAL QUESTION.

Asked by Hundreds of Portsmouth People—A Citizen Answers It.

Our citizens who have been entrapped into reading an innocent looking piece of newspaper composition that turned out to be a cleverly worded introduction to some proprietary medicine advertisements always stop the perusal of it when they discover the fraud, some with impatience, some mentally vowing they won't be foolish again. Other readers who are honestly searching for a remedy advertised in their daily paper, drop onto one, and invariably the first question is, Can this be true? This leads to a more important one, why don't they publish local testimony instead of forever asking us to believe statements of someone we are not sure even exists? Carefully read the following and see if it does not fulfill the bill:

Mr. Lemuel T. White, of No. 26 Bridge street, at one time a conductor on the B. & M. R. R., now engaged at the more sedentary occupation of superintending the lasting of shoes, says: "I had something wrong with my kidneys for five years. I contracted it while I was railroading, and my later occupation in a shoe factory has not decreased it. I have to use one foot on the pedal of my machine while standing on the other, and it is very fatiguing. At first there were pains and aches in the small of my back, but afterwards annoyance from the kidney secretions set in and broke my rest at night. I was oppressed with languor and a loss of energy. I thought from reading notices about Doan's Kidney Pills they might help me, and I procured a box at Philbrick's pharmacy. They acted on my kidneys right away. The urinary difficulty was the first to mend. When on my second box I could sit comfortably and read my paper of an evening without experiencing that jerking of my limbs that every other remedy had failed to stop. I am confident that a better kidney remedy does not exist.

MERRY MASKERS.

Annual Ball of the Ivanhoe Club a Grand Success.

Many Handsome as Well as Unique Costumes Worn by Dancers.

The fifth annual masquerade ball of the Ivanhoe club, held in Peirce hall last evening, was one of the most successful in the history of this popular organization. The hall was crowded with maskers, there being several comical and unique costumes. That of young Harry Marston, who was disguised as a hobo, and the four witches impersonated by Mrs. E. P. Lawrence, Mrs. Wallace Lear, Miss Vandyke of Boston, and Mr. Frank Gould, were very fine. There were many other grotesque costumes and some exceedingly original characters.

Joy and Philbrick's orchestra of eight pieces, furnished the music for the dance and also gave a fine concert preceding the same. Master Daniel Coffee, the noted boy soprano of Biddeford, was present and participated in the concert, rendering several songs and was enthusiastically applauded. Master Coffee has a very sweet, clear voice, and it will be remembered sang in the concert preceding the dance given by the club a year ago.

The following was the concert program: March, Lady of the Lake, St. Clair
Medley, A Trip Around Town, Beyer
Overture, Frolics of Cupid, Gruenwald
Waltzes, Auf Wiederschn

The grand march was a very pretty feature and was participated in by about fifty couples, all in costumes and disguised in almost every kind of makeup. The march was led by Floor Manager J. Walter Scott in a cadet uniform and Assistant Floor Manager J. S. Tilton, Jr., in a female costume and known as the belle of the ball.

The galleries were crowded with spectators during the evening watching the animated scene on the floor below and all present voted it one of the most successful dances held in this city so far this season.

The following gentlemen had charge of the floor;

Floor Manager, J. Walter Scot;
Assistant Floor Manager, J. S. Tilton, Jr.
Aids, Fred D. Jones, J. Will Rogers, W. F. Lesser, A. M. Trefethen, E. H. Voudy, Alex. Bilbruck, J. Will Kehoe.

It was one o'clock in the morning before the last waltz was played and the tired but happy dancers went out into the storm and wended their way homewards.

Among those on the floor in costume were the following:

George A Hanscom, bicycle rider
J B Walton, sailor
E D Call, jockey
Harry Sides, Sinbad the sailor
Harry Marston, a tramp

Presented an Easy Chair

One of the pleasantest incidents of the Knights Templar gathering on Monday evening, was the presentation to the veteran treasurer of DeWitt Clinton Commandery, Sir Wingate N. Illsley, of a magnificent leather upholstered, adjustable easy chair, one of the finest that money could purchase and forming a splendid testimonial of the esteem in which the recipient is held by his brother sir knights and their appreciation of the faithful service he has rendered for a quarter of a century or longer in his responsible office.
